

Why Charter?

The first reason most people charter an aircraft is the fact that the aircraft is theirs for the duration of the trip required. It could be seen as a status and expensive extravagance. However there are other factors that can justify it:

- There is little or no queuing for tickets and baggage checks at the airports that your aircraft will depart and arrive. You are generally escorted through direct to the aircraft via a dedicated handling agent. You are even escorted through customs. This can save time and money and therefore can benefit business users and to degree pleasure seekers – more time to explore your destination and get your business done.
- Depending on the aircraft that has been chartered and its configuration, you will have a cabin to yourself and your friends and/or colleagues, a more personal flight attendant service (if the cabin is large enough) and catering that you can order in advance<sup>1</sup>.
- Another advantage of chartering aircraft, are the airports used. They can depart and arrive from smaller airports that most airlines cannot operate to. This can assist with helping you get close to your destination.
- With helicopters, there is an added advantage – they can land and take off from almost anywhere. They can get you directly into and out of: city centres, sports events and even hotels without relying too much on road transport to and from the airport. You can even link a helicopter charter to/from the airport for your fixed wing flight.

It's not only Aircraft that can be chartered

<sup>1</sup> Catering on small turboprops, jets and helicopters is generally cold buffet style, but with facility to make hot drinks. Larger aircraft have equipment to heat meals and are served by a flight attendant if applicable.

Aircraft are not the only transport modes to be chartered. Limousines (cars and luxury van/mini-buses) and Yachts have the capacity to take you in comfort to places you like and want to visit. A typical yacht can be chartered for 12 persons. Bigger yachts are available.

You can now link these to make a smooth transition:

- Limousine from your house or workplace to the airport/heliport and return
- Limousine from airport/heliport to hotel or meeting place and return
- Limousine from Airport to port to pick up your yacht and return.
